RAUCY ONCE AGAIN.

The Republicans are to Gather in Lappin's Hall Next Monday Evening.

The Republicans are to have their last rally of the campaign at Lappin's hall next Monday evening. There is to be good music, plenty of fun and jubilation, songs by the Glee Club, five minute talks by prominent speakers, and an evening crowded full of enthusiasm and interest. Let the hall be packed full, and let everybody take a personal interest in making this meeting a grand success.

BRIEFLETS.

—Shave up and scrub down.

—All Hallow Eve to-morrow.

—Remember Jay Rial's Humpty Dumpty show next Tuesday evening at the Opera house.

—The contracts for furnishing ice for the season are up now, as the season closes to-day.

—The Cluster Rules of Whitewater, had their annual inspection last night, and showed up 44 men in line.

—The funeral services of Sergeant Childers will be held at the Congregational church to-morrow afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock.

—Harry Anderson's orchestra furnished music, last evening, for the Madison people who attended the party given by the Lake City Guards.

—Next Wednesday evening John Dillon is to light up the Opera house with his "Electric Light." Dillon always draws well and pleases all.

—The Bradford folk seem bound that minors shall not play billiards. The second complaint of this sort has caused George Munnell to be brought before Justice Wickham.

—Among those who occupied seats on the platform at the rousing Republican rally at Evansville, was George Potter, who has had considerable local prominence in Democratic circles.

—John K. P. Porter, of Porter, to-day headed a squad of ten Norwegians who marched to the office of the Clerk of the Court to get their naturalization papers, preparatory to voting the Republican ticket.

—John Hynes met with a slight accident this forenoon at the Harris works where he is employed. Two fingers were badly cut and smashed, but Dr. St. John thinks they can be saved, and will be of some use hereafter.

—At Footville, last night, the new hall, called Owen's hall, was crowded with those eager to hear what the Republican speakers had to say. Mr. Lyman presided, and Hon. James Sutherland and A. H. Baxter, Esq., addressed the meeting. Footville has been rather quiet, but last night was stirred up well.

—Last evening Hon. H. A. Patterson gave the Clinton folk a rousing speech. The hall was filled, the enthusiasm great, and the music furnished by a glee club was excellent. It bore quite a contrast to the attempted Democratic rally last Monday evening, and the enthusiasm shown indicates an increased Republican majority in Clinton.

—James Jones, of the town of Coater, who for three months evaded the officers, who wanted him to answer to a petty assault, and who was afterwards arrested for resisting an officer, has made his peace with the county by paying the costs in the action thus far, being about $96. He probably has concluded that he was mistaken in thinking that no officer in the county could capture him.

—The attention of everybody on the streets to-day was called to a jaunty four pony team, drawing a little wagon. Ponies and wagon alike were covered with attractive letterings bespeaking the fact that M. C. Smith & Son are still selling good clothing cheap. The public have already learned this fact pretty well, judging from the immense business which that house is doing, but the pony team is a pleasing way to remind the public that the boom keeps up with them.

—An old veteran fell from the second story of Lappin's block this morning and suffered a broken neck. It was no other than the old watch which has hung at the entrance of Webb & Hall's jewelry store for twenty years past. It has stood bravely the wild onslaughts of cyclonic winds, but strangely enough an ordinary sort of a zephyr succeeded to-day in breaking it all up in business. The jewelry business will be carried on by Webb & Hall just the same though. As a counteracting influence to the fall of the watch, is a marked improvement in the store by the addition of a new and elegant show case, made by M. Hanson & Co., and which will soon be made to dazzle by being filled up with choice silverware.

—We took a hasty glimpse to-day at the furniture stock piled up in M. Hanson & Co.'s warehouse, and made at their factory. The stock embraces everything in the furniture line, in all varieties of style and price. Their bedroom sets are especially noticeable, and among them are many very unique and elegant ones. In parlor furniture too there is a fine showing, and there seems no end to lounges, tables, chairs, etc., etc. In extension tables alone they have made during the last six months enough to stretch a half mile straight, and that is only a small feature of their business. The goods piled up in all stages of completion enable a customer to see for himself just what material is being used, and how the work is being done, so that all doubt of the quality of the goods is forever laid at rest. M. Hanson & Co., are doing a thriving business, and report trade as much better than a year ago.

THE WEATHER.

RILEY'S RECORD.

The letter received by Mrs. Mack's attorneys signed by John Riley, and claiming that Dickerson had told the writer of the letter that he and another man had killed Mack, and that Mrs. Mack had nothing to do with it, having been brought into public notice, the following letter will be perused with interest as showing what manner of man Riley is, Mr. White being Deputy Warden of the State Prison, and knowing whereof he affirms:

WATKINS, Wis., Oct. 28, 1880.

J. J. Conkstock, Janesville, Wis.

DEAR SIR—I notice quite a controversy going on over the letter received by Mrs. Mack's attorneys. I suppose the matter has become so hot that the letter or its writer do not get much of a figure in the matter; but it occurred to me that they were making a great deal over so small a matter. The facts are these: John Riley, the writer of the letter, was discharged from this institution August 6th, for the seventh time. He has served at least one term beside in some other prison. He has been here most of the time since 1880. The last time he was out but seven months. He is a notorious sneak thief, but without brains to make himself a successful crook. He is a keeper and frequenter of houses of ill fame of the lowest kind. That is the kind of "thing" he is. Now as to the probability of the truth of his story, neither Dickerson or Shell know him or ever spoke to him. He could not have spoken to Dickerson on the Fourth of July, or to Budd, Dickerson and Shell have never exchanged one word since they have been in this institution. They have had no opportunity. They have been kept so far apart as the limits of the cell house would allow. I write this to you, and you are at liberty to make such use of it as you see fit.

Very truly yours,

ALEX WHITE.

THE MACK TRIAL, PERHAPS—THE LAST WORD.

I had occasion some days ago to notice a communication of H. S. Conger's, which I then characterized, as I know it deserved to be characterized, and I will now notice his last, which, like his first, is at variance with the truth, or, even the semblance of truth. For the office of judge, I have the most profound respect; it is an office that honors the man holding it, but candor compels me to add that the man does not always honor the office. Except for the errors committed by Judge Conger upon the first trial of this case, a second trial would not have followed. Nor would the controversy, unjustly begun by him, have arisen. With him, and with him alone, rests the responsibility for its beginning. I will accept my full share for continuance, and conclusion. In his last communication, H. S. Conger characterizes certain parts of my answer as the "subterfuge of a pettifogger." For this I thank him, yes, thank him for the word as well as the implied suggestion. It brings to my mind, as it doubtless has to yours, and to your readers, the thought, that had the bench during the Mack, and other trials, been occupied by a respectable pettifogger, errors might have been less frequent; taxes less burdensome and our legislators relieved from the consideration of measures looking to the creation of new, and less expensive court for our county. That even a pettifogger for a judge, if he were not a common scold, to the annoyance of witnesses, jurors, officers, and the bar, might, in a financial point of view, at least, compensate for the loss of one so able, and so learned in the law, but so excessively weighted with the "proprietries" due to the position, as is the present incumbent.

His complaint, so far as I am able to understand him is, that the letter of October 11th, to the Banner, makes him guilty of a "judicial impropriety," and says, in substance, that he is incapable of the commission of one. I hope, and trust he is. Certainly I have not intended to charge, nor have I charged him, with the commission of one in connection with the Mack case; but, on the contrary, said letter was written with the intention of relieving him from the suspicion, even, of having committed one. He will not accept my vindication; but insists on vindicating himself, and with what success, is for the public to judge. Accepting his statement of our conversation and the circumstances attending it, then surely he committed a gross "judicial impropriety." While he admits our conversation was had in open court, and in the presence of counsel and jury, still he insists it was private, and confidential, and not intended by him that others should hear.

I have said, to his credit, that it was neither private, or confidential; that I had no reason for concealment, and did not then suppose he had. But, if it was such as he claims it to have been,—private, confidential, secret, and I knowing it to have been such, made it public, which I disclaim, then, I did a wrong, not to him but to myself, and he, a Judge, was guilty of a far greater wrong in permitting himself to hold such a conversation, in relation to the case then pending. While the statements in the letter of October 11th, did him no wrong, and are the exact truth, his makes him guilty of the imaginary wrong he complains of. If Mr. H. S. Conger as judge, has not, and shall not commit any greater judicial impropriety than the assumed one he says I have charged him with, then the bar and people of the Twelfth Judicial Circuit will have no cause for complaint. He also charges me with a betrayal of his confidence, adding, that he surely had not told our conversation, and if known to others, it being private, I must have done so. This implies some reason for concealment on his part. I had none. What was his? Was he conscious of having committed a "judicial impropriety?" And if the conversation was a proper one between court and counsel, what confidence could be betrayed? It looks as though H. S. Conger should have selected some judicious friend to vindicate him, if vindication were necessary, or better still, have left it, where the letter of October 11th, left it. It is not anything I have said or done, but his own attempted vindication, that hits.

I said in my former communication that Mr. Conger was unjust to me, and was unjust to truth, and in conclusion will add that he has been unjust to himself. That if our courts become a "solemn mockery," and our "judges infamous," it will be his, and their fault, not mine.
